

Students for the Salish Sea PROTOCOL

(A living document)

We hold land acknowledgements at the beginning of every meeting.

We acknowledge that we are guests on this land, we work to cultivate an environment of humility where we are always learning.

We work locally to affect change, in order to positively impact our transnational watershed as a whole. We collaborate with our other university branches on watershed-wide issues to cultivate lasting change.

We work to establish leadership based in less hierarchy and more collective decision-making through non-violent communication, transparency and accountability.

We are dedicated towards supporting and empowering women, non-binary and gender nonconforming students, students of color, and indigenous students in leadership positions within the Students for the Salish Sea.
